THE PARABLE OF THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS :

Christ never said that the rich will not enter into the Kingdom of God. In the Bible, we know examples of righteous men who were very rich: The righteous Joseph - the son of Israel - controlled the vast treasures of Pharaoh, was arrayed in a royal manner (Genesis 41:40-45) and was the second man in the realm. The righteous Job - blameless and God-fearing - was very rich: He had 7,000 head of livestock, 3,000 camels, 500 pair of oxen and 500 she-asses and a great many servants (Job 1:3).

Why did the rich man end up hell? It does not say in the Gospel that he was evil, cruel, depraved, godless or impious. The Evangelist Mark discloses the crux of the matter to us and says that many of the rich are condemned not because of their wealth, but because of their trust in it: how hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! (Mark 10-24). Excessive repletion, satiety and self-satisfaction are dangerous for a man. And it is precisely this that is bad, and not any other, external thing. Money is not bad in itself, but one's attitude toward it. It is bad to be limited, self-satisfied and at ease. And, on the contrary, it is good to be dissatisfied with oneself, always to hunger and thirst after righteousness, always be conscious of ourselves as destitute, not self-sufficient, but dependent on God.

The rich man's fault was that he lived only for the flesh; he enjoyed earthly goods without measure and completely stifled within himself every manifestation of spiritual life. By this, precisely, he also prepared for himself a bitter fate. If a man will only pass from one amusement to another, from one carnal pleasure to another, he will make his soul incapable of any spiritual sensation. And this will be so even in the event he does not commit great sins. This is evident from the example of the rich man. He became hardened in soul to such an extent that he did not show any compassion for Lazarus, who lay at his gate and whom he constantly saw. The soul of the rich man became incapable of love for his neighbour.

The Apostle Paul says: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting (Galatians 6:7-8)". Each man himself prepares for himself his portion beyond the grave. If he abides in God's will, that is, does His commandments, which command love toward God and neighbour; if he repents when he transgresses these commandments in any way; if he nourishes his soul with the Church's mysteries; if he abides in prayerful communion with the Lord; then about such a man one may say that he soweth to the Spirit. Such a man already in this life begins communion with the spiritual world; he becomes, as it were, its citizen. After death, such a man enters into a better world and enjoys its good things, because during his temporal life he managed to acquire in himself the ability to enjoy them.

Story and Lessons:

Changing our vision

There was a very wealthy man who was bothered by severe eye pain. He consulted many physicians and was being treated by several. He did not stop consulting a galaxy of medical experts; he consumed heavy loads of drugs and underwent hundreds of injections. But the ache persisted with more vigour than before.

At last, a monk who was supposed to be an expert in treating such patients was called for by the suffering man. The monk understood his problem and said that for some time he should concentrate only on green colours and not to let his eyes fall on any other colours. It was a strange prescription, but he was desperate and decided to try it.

The millionaire got together a group of painters and purchased barrels of green paint and directed that every object his eye was likely to fall to be painted green just as the monk had directed. When the monk came to visit him after few days, the millionaire's servants ran with buckets of green paint and poured it on him since he was in red dress, lest their master see any other colour and his eye ache would come back.

Hearing this, the monk laughed and said "If only you had purchased a pair of green spectacles, worth just a few dollars, you could have saved these walls and trees and pots and all other articles and also could have saved a large share of his fortune. You cannot paint the world green."

Let us change our vision and the world will appear accordingly. It is foolish to shape the world, let us shape ourselves first.

Fathers quotes:

"We have very little faith in the Lord, very little trust. If we trusted the Lord as much as we trust a friend when we ask him to do something for us, neither we as individuals nor our whole country would suffer so much"

Elder Thaddeus

"Possibly a contentious unbeliever will maintain that we worshipping images in our churches are convicted of praying to lifeless idols. Far be it from us to do this. Faith makes Christians, and God, who cannot deceive, works miracles. We do not rest contented with mere colouring. With the material picture before our eyes we see the invisible God through the visible representation, and glorify Him as if present, not as a God without reality, but as a God who is the essence of being. Nor are the saints whom we glorify fictitious. They are in being, and are living with God; and their spirits being holy, the help, by the power of God, those who deserve and need their assistance"

St John of Damascus

"To have faith in Christ means more than despising the delights of this life. It means we should bear all our daily trials that may bring us sorrow, distress, or unhappiness, and bear them patiently for as long as God wishes and until He comes to visit us. For it is said, "I waited on the Lord and He came to me"".
